BRITISH TITLES MAY BE HAD FOR MONEY

(Correspondence Associated Press)
LONDON, July 1.—The tender spot in British political life today is the dispensation of titles. There are awarded, of course, by the king, but on the nomination of the prime minister, and the criticism of reformers is that titles have been given for a long time and by various prime ministers for purely party services and practically bought by contributions to party funds.

The House of Lords has a peculiar interest in this matter because the old, noble families are jealous of having their caste lowered by the addition of the newly rich, and purely rich to the orders of nobility.

The question was threshed out last year and there was a general understanding that hereafter when honors were announced the reason for their bestowal should be published. This has been done in form but it is alleged not in substance, because several much criticised honors in the last list were described as "for public service," which might mean almost anything.

The new National party, which has a few members in the House of Commons, has taken up the question. The chairman, General Page Croft, has written to the newspapers proposing to prove before any judicial committee that since 1910 one member of parliament has rejected an offer of a title in return for a cash payment to party funds and that the father of a member of the house of commons was offered a baronetcy for £25,000.

He charged also that a member of parliament who was created a peer after the beginning of the war subscribed shortly afterward a very large sum of money to a newspaper that supports the premier.

He mentions also instances in which he says titles were granted to a politician of so notorious a character as to be regarded as unfit to be a candidate for parliament, to another politician regarded as unscrupulous and to a third man "previously involved in a notorious social scandal."

General Page Croft offered to prove all his charges.

MAY RESUME SOON

Dick Randall, who has been the sheriff of Lyon county for 25 years, says rumors are current that the smelter at Thompson will soon resume operations, and, while nothing official has been announced, activity around the various mines of the Mason valley district indicates that such a move is in contemplation. More men are being put to work and repairs are being made, all of which tends to show the the mines will be turning out the normal production of copper in the near future.

Mr. Randall says there has been a serious shortage of water this year and in some places crops have suffered from drought.

Victor Berger is still standing around in Washington and nobody offers him a seat in the house.
